THE G. A. R. AND PENSIONS.

Department Commander Sample of Pennsylvania Gives His Views. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 1.-The twenty-eighth annual encampment of the G. A. R., Department of Pennsylvania, was called to order by Department Commander Thos. G. Sample of Pittsburg in the Academy of Music this morning. About 1,200 delegates were in attendance. Edwin Walton of this city, a member of the reception committee, introduced Mayor Stewart, who delivered the address of wel-

Commander Sample replied for the G.A.R. Edward J. McDermott of Louisville, Ky., was then introduced. Supplemental to his address Mr. McDermott presented the Deent of Pennsylvania with an oak gavel which was made by an Ohio soldier of wood taken from a tree near the home of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. McDermott said that he was here as a representative of the Commercial Club of Louisville to invite the G. A.R. men to hold their next annual encampment in that city. No encampment had ever been held south of Mason and Dixon's line, and Louisville was desirous of entertaining the boys in blue.
Commander Sample thanked Mr. McDermott on behalf of the G.A.R., and said that if it was decided to hold the next encamp-ment in the south he felt sure that Louisville would be selected.

On the question of pensions Commander Sample in his annual address said:
"No consistent member of the Grand Army of the Republic desires an illegal pension to be paid, and I believe every com-rade stands ready to assist the government to purge the roll of every fraudulent sloner, if there are any, but we should also demand that no names shall be stricken from the rolls simply to reduce the amount of money to be paid by the government. A pensioner having proven his right to be on the roll once, it should require some-thing more than an anonymous communication to take him from the roll. Neither should he be humiliated by being compelled to submit to an investigation or examina-tion by men who served in the rebel army. I am of the opinion that all this hue and cry against the pensioners has been caused by a class of men who have no sympathy for the ex-Union soldier, and as proof of that statement I am advised by a member of Congress that there are now in the field 108 more special examiners than there were in February, 1893, and 80 per cent of them have been appointed from the states that were in rebellion. will go down to history as President Cleveland's yacht. She was never designed for such distinction and has gained it by the merest accident. The U. S. S. Dolphin, a modern steel cruiser, built by the late John Roach, is popularly supposed to be the President's yacht, but for some unknown reason President Cleveland has shown a singular antipathy to her. She has been placed at his disposal several times when he was known to have an aquatic excursion in mind, but he never availed himself of the privilege of treading her quarter deck, either as commander-inchief of the army and navy or as a private citizen. Originally intended as a ship of war, she has since been transformed into a pleasure yacht. Her appointments are elegant, and her accommodations for the comfort and convenience of passengers are unsurpased by any ship in the navy. She adapted to the entertainment of guests, and was severely tested in that respect by Secretary Herbert and Admiral Gherardi during the recent Columbian naval review. Therefore it was natural, when the Presi dent recently expressed a desire to take an outing on the river for a few days, that Secretary Herbert thought of placing the Dolphin at his disposal. In such matters to think is to act. The Dolphin was lying idle at New York. All that was necessary to bring her to Washington was to send a telegraphic order to that effect to her commander. This was two weeks ago and two days later the Dolphin was at anchor at the Washington navy yard. Rejected Dolphin.

The President was informed of that fact. with the additional statement that the vessel was ready to take him wherever he desired to go within the bounds of possibility. He was very grateful of course, but really he had not thought of going to sea, and moreover, he couldn't do so, you know, without leaving the jurisdiction of the United States. There is a constitutional prejudice, or something of that sort, against the President leaving the United States during his term of office. Moreover, Mr. Cleveland wanted recreation more than he did a cruise on the raging main, and he believed he could get more of it in the shallow waters of the sounds of North Carolina, hunting the succulent duck in its winter retreat, than he could in enforc-

It is possible that the President never gave utterance to such thoughts as these Nevertheless it is a fact that he discarded the sumptuously appointed Dolphin for the plain little Violet. He had cruised on the Violet before and had formed an attachment for her. Moreover, she could take him where he wanted to go and the naval vessel could not. Her accommodations, while not so fine as those of the Dolphin, were very good. He had previously tested them in a short cruise down the Potomac with Secretaries Gresham and Carlisle and Capt. Evans of the navy, and they had met all requirements. True, the present trip is a more extended one, but then the party is smaller by the absence of Secretary Car-lisle.

The distinguished party left here last Sun day in a blinding snow storm and are now supposed to be engaged in the highly excal government a long-sought-for opportun-ity to conclude an alliance with the great dynastic states of central Europe, and this hilarating sport of ducking in the quiet waters of Currituck or Albemarle sound, N. C. The region is a paradise for ducks, and the season is now at its height. With these conditions, the Presidential ducking expedition can be a failure only through the fault of the hunters.

The Violet, which has become a national institution by its frequent use by the President, is one of the oldest vessels in the light house service. She it attached to the fifth light district, embracing the coast and navigable waters of Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina, and her special province is to visit the light houses, buoys and other aids to navigation in that district at regular intervals, to see that they are in good con-dition, and also to render their keepers any assistance that may be required. She is a side wheel steamer of 155 tons measure-ment, with a speed of ten knots in smooth She was built at Staten Island, N. 1861, and was used by the government for naval purposes during the war, at the close of which she was added to the light house establishment, where she has ever since. Her hull is of oak and underwent extensive repairs in 1886 Her dimensions are as follows: Length be-tween perpendiculars, 143 feet; breadth of beam, 23 feet, but including outside guards 39 feet and 8 inches; draught, light, 6 feet; loaded, 7 feet. She is provided with a low pressure beam engine and one return tubu-lar boiler. She has a foremast fifty-four feet above deck, and a foretopmast twelve feet long. A large derrick is also a promi-nent feature of her fore deck. She is painted black outside and vellow predominates pacity of sixty tons, sufficient for a ten ays' cruise, and a capacity for provisions ufficient for thirty days. There are two large state rooms, with bath room attachments, in the main saloon, and there is another large state room on the port guard. The first two are occupied by President Cleve-land and Secretary Gresham, and the other by Capt. Evans. There are in addition four berths, 6 feet by 3 feet, in the cabin, and twelve berths, 6 feet by 2, in the forecastle. These are occupied by the officers and crew of the vessel. The probabilities are that the officers fare better in the matter of sleeping accommodations when they no guests. The cabin is thirty-two feet long and is well furnished. The vessel is officially reported to be in good condition in every respect, and will undoubtedly acquit herself creditably on this occasion. She is now on her own cruising ground, and is in no danger of accidents. Her regula: duties require her to make frequent trips through the Dismal Swamp route to the sounds of North Carolina, and her known availability for that purpose was the main reason for her selection for the special use by the Pres-ident and the Secretary of State.

Those who were eager for the fray decided that Discussion of Topics.

The third day's session of the National Electric Light Association began at 10:30 of Italian patriots, but it finally entered upon an alliance which appeared destined to secure to it the scepter of an undivided Italian realm. The almost immediate realization of this hope was made feasible by o'clock this morning, with the usual large Capital: One Million Dollars attendance. From every point of view the convention has been one of the most successful and satisfactory that has ever lization of this hope was made reasible by the agreement between Cavour and Garl-baldi. There can no longer be the slightest doubt that the diplomacy of the house of Savoy secretly encouraged the Garibaldian assault upon the two Sicilies. At the conclusion of the paper the subject was placed before the convention, and a discussion ensued. This was opened by Prof. Weston, who took the ground that the present systems, as a rule, are faulty, and result in a very material loss. Unergy is frittered away in the conductors so that French victory at Solferino. Moreover, the alliance with Austria and Germany was reaches the consumer, and the electric light company is thereby a loser. A total change must be made in the near future, when station managers begin to see how much they lose even on their switchboards and the methods recommended by Mr interests were opposed to this diplomatic change of front. Italy depended first and foremost on French credit. Thanks to French money, she was enabled to restore and the methods recommended by Mr. Herrick today, said Prof. Weston, will very soon be abandoned. Prof. Weston read a series of estimates, and showed that a loss of a tenth of a volt in ten feet of conduc Watt hour, twenty-four hours a day, would amount in a year to a pecuniary loss of
